

Does it always have to be this way?

Do rising energy costs leave you frustrated and angry, feeling like there's no end in sight?

Are you tired of sending thousands of young soldiers off to fight wars in places no one cares about?

Does the idea of a politicized Supreme Court disturb you?

And what about a gridlocked government that seems to have forgotten what it was elected to do?

Alan Zendell's Critical Focus, says we can make things better. Critical Focus is about fresh ideas and common sense, and people in key places with the courage to stand up to corruption and special interests. It's unabashedly optimistic, but don't we need some of that?
