Dependency is an excruciating, unhappy disease to endure, and there are many people that are afflicted by dependency to drugs or alcohol, and those that have loved ones that are afflicted by dependency to drugs and/or alcohol. Rehabilitation, or rehab, is a process meant to help addicts come to understand their dependency, learn to identify and steer clear of triggers that lead them to use, and learn to live successfully as an addict in recovery. In order to fulfill the physical, mental, social, medical, vocational, and emotional requirements of all their clients, Drug Rehab Orange, CA creates individualized, custom-designed treatment plans, and provides a wholesome, sympathetic atmosphere for addicts that are wanting to start the process of recovery.

Drug Rehab Orange, CA's Services

Lots of individuals and entire families are living in terror that the 'outside world' will discover their problems with dependency, which is sadly a result of the stigma of being classified as 'an addict.' However typical this reaction to addiction is, it usually causes frustration, fury, and animosity between family members, friends, and the addict. Especially in these cases, an intervention can be the best way to get an addict to enter rehabilitation, so Intervention Orange strongly suggests using a counselor, or an interventionist (an intervention professional) to supervise the intervention itself. Interventions are not only efficient for persuading an addict to agree to rehabilitation, but can also create a safe atmosphere for people to voice their concerns, irritation, and anger in a manageable way.

Detox is a process that is sometimes also mistaken for treatment, however it is very important to keep in mind that detox won't 'cure' an addict from their problems with substance abuse. Detox, or detoxification, is a great first step towards recovery, and helps the addict correctly and quickly withdraw from the substance(s) they are dependent on, sometimes with the help of medicine. Social detoxification is a procedure that can be completed in a residential or outpatient facility, and involves instructing and preparing an addict for rehab. Medically supervised detoxification (also called medically supervised withdrawal) is a kind of detox that happens in a hospital or inpatient facility in which the addict's withdrawal is guided by a nurse or doctor. Depending on the needs of their client, Detox Orange will offer either form of detox.

Drug Rehab in Orange provides safe, effective treatment for people at all stages of addiction, from people that have only begun to feel the effects of addiction, to people who have been habitually using drugs or alcohol. Their rehabilitation programs include, but aren't limited to, treatment for alcohol, opiates (heroin, codeine), prescription drugs (pharmaceuticals, hydrocodone, oxycodone), designer drugs (bath salts, many stimulants), crystal meth, cocaine, hallucinogens, and marijuana. For the most powerful and effective rehabilitation, Drug Rehab Orange, CA assesses how debilitating the dependency is, any contributing psychological factors (such as co-occurring disorders), and what path to recovery will be most efficient for each individual client.
