

Dr. Abello giving her lecture to WVSU Students.

“Ang pag-ibig ay parang P-drug.

Pinag-iisipan yan,” - Dr. Abello

Those were the words Dr. Myrna Abello asserted during the workshop lecture held at Roxas Hall, WVSU last March 14, 2014.

The workshop, entitled Basics of Prescription Writing, was one of the workshops/seminars that the Order of Asclepius regularly holds for its members for learning and practical purposes such as upcoming medical and surgical missions. It was also a first for the newly elected officers to spearhead.

Senior Lady Asclepian Denise Patricia Granada introduced Dr. Abello as the guest speaker. Dr. Abello was the former dean of WVSU-COM and equipped with her adept knowledge and passion in clinical pharmacology made her perfect for the role as speaker. With her witty metaphors as comparing a prescription to that of a letter and the thought processing it requires to that of love, discussions turned out to be not only informative but fun as well.

An open forum was held after the lecture followed by the giving of certificate of appreciation and token to the speaker by the SLA accompanied by Junior Master Asclepian Argee Alonsabe. After which Mateo Te, batch leader of Batch 36, continued the workshop with a lecturette on history taking and physical examination with emphasis on vital signs taking.

Indeed, the learnings and insights gained with this activity would surely be of utmost application in the upcoming activities of the Order. Thank you so much Doc!
