Everybody's Talking!

Cuddling kangaroo: If someone is going to get lost in the bush, it helps if a kangaroo comes along to share its body heat on a cold night. That's what happened to a little boy in the Deep Creek Conservation Park in South Australia. Simon Kruger went exploring in the nearby bush and got separated from his family's picnic. A rescue party was called in and Simon was found safe and sound the next day. He explained that he slept under a tree and that kangaroos came to visit him. One ate the flowers he had picked for his mother, then fell asleep beside him, keeping him warm during the chilly night.

Doggy heaven: Talk about pampered pets! There is a hotel in Vienna, Austria, that caters to the dogs of its guests. In the 19th century, the Hotel Sacher was once owned by Anna Sacher, who loved her French bulldogs. In keeping with the pet-loving history of the hotel, the current management decided to provide special rooms with all the things that dogs need, such as baskets, blankets and feeding bowls. A dog's owner can obtain dog food from the concierge or, if desired, can order a steak from the hotel's kitchen. Rules do apply, however. Furry guests are not allowed in the spa or in the restaurants and they must be kept on leashes at all times.

Bus love: Getting married on a bus is not something most couples would think to do, but for Nina Schmidt and Jarred Greff of Vancouver, British Columbia (CAN), it only made sense. The pair first met on the No. 3 TransLink bus during a commute one day. They noticed each other, and when a seat became available beside Nina, Jarred sat down beside her. They went bowling on their first date and not long after realized they were in love. It was arranged for wedding guests to take seats on that very bus to witness the nuptials. Fittingly, the wedding took place during the city's "I Love Transit Week," and it was sponsored by the transit company.

Caring thieves: Some burglars in San Bernardino County in California (US) had a change of heart after committing a crime. In the middle of the night, they broke into a non-profit agency that helps victims of abuse. They cut alarm wires so they would not be detected, then stole the agency's computers. Executive Director Candy Stallings was upset to discover the theft, but what happened the next day truly amazed her. The thieves brought back the computers in a shopping cart and left them at the front door, along with a heartfelt note of apology stating that they hoped the agency could continue to make a difference in people's lives.

Did You Know...

Extinct bird: Passenger pigeons were once so plentiful in North America that the sky would become dark when a flock passed by. These migratory birds became extinct in 1914 when the last one, known as Martha, died at the Cincinnati Zoo (US).

Keep your distance! Those who think crocodiles are dangerous should beware of the box jellyfish, also known as the sea wasp. These creatures live in waters around Australia and have deadly toxins in their tentacles.

Potato facts: Potatoes are a staple in the diets of many people and they have been cultivated for many years. There are also about 187 species of inedible wild potatoes, with South America having the highest concentration.

Official name: Few westerners may know that the official name of Japan is Nippon. This country is a land of islands, having four large ones and over 3,900 smaller ones.

Ouch! When people bump their 'funny bone,' what they have actually hit is their humerus, the upper arm bone. However, it is no laughing matter when this happens, as the nerve endings near the elbow can result in pain or a tingling sensation when bumped.
