1. Introduction

1.1. Small description of Waj

Waj is a constructed language (conlang), created and developed from 2013 to 2014 hej libi by myself, Patrick Bowen, in an attempt to make a easy to use and remember language. Over the years of its development, it has gone through a lot of changes, but has always remained the language of which I revere as me. It's the first and currently last effort of mine to create a fully functioning language, and its start was simply me playing around.

I have to give many thanks to /r/conlangs on Reddit.com for all their goals and interests, and for making me feel included and known within their community, though, as this document shows, I am a terrible excuse of a conlanger.

1.2. Its ancestor & history

Waj, in its early stages, was called “Rhohine,” and was a complete mess of a language; using English spelling, with no actual goal or purpose, it was only saved by the fact I realised early-on that I controlled a language and its development, and I'm enjoying myself. Soon, after words such as shkafshka for you had been shortened, and I realised English has a lot of words which mean multiple things, and how you needed auxiliary verbs and used irregular nouns, my tinkering increased.

It was, as I thought then, rather late when I was Googling about something to do with Klingon or Esperanto and I stumbled upon Reddit and its online Conlanging community - “I'm not the only one!” Their posts and challenges pushed me to start doing long translations, testing out types of sentences I never gave thought to. Seeing other peoples' projects develop with things I thought, “if I was making another language, I'd do that,” but instead it made me put a tighter hold on Waj – making it smaller and more efficient. Something which has played a great part in making Waj was also making an online translator created along-side it. The program stretched my coding skills as it did Waj, while it also making the language extremely easy for a computer to translate. (English to Waj is a lot more difficult than Waj to English).

1.3. Waj's future

Sadly, Waj has no future. As of November 2014, Waj shall cease to have any work put towards it from me. As a conlanger, I have come to realise that I can do far better at achieving my personal goal of having a small, good-looking conlang. My next project, zaz, shall include things like tone and defined word structure. It is a shame that Waj has to end, after years of its development and use by me, but to make a good progress, I have to move on. Of course, I don't fully control its future – anybody who reads this (especially in this amount of depth) could take it upon themselves to use or even take this project and somehow add on it.

1.4. A secret text for you to translate an c'caji j'waj the big secret of Waj...

2. Meta

2.1. Pronunciation

2.1.1. Sounds of letters

The sounds of all the letters in Waj are wrote to be phonetically equivalent, but of course, malformation can occur when spoken. It is up to the speaker how exactly they pronounce things, so long as it would be understandable to their peers.

2.1.2. IPA Table

Latin script		IPA	Spoken like...	Latin script		IPA	Spoken like...
A	a	/a/	c at	P	p	/p/	p at
B	b	/b/	b at	Q	q	/ɒ/	o ranger
C	c	/k/	c at	R	r	/r/	r ate (spoken with a tap)
D	d	/d/	d og	S	s	/s/	s it
E	e	/ɛ/	b et	T	t	/t/	t ap
F	f	/f/	f rog	U	u	/ʌ/	h ug
G	g	/g/	goat	W	w	/w/	w ait
H	h	/h/	h at	Y	y	/ɪ/	b i t
I	i	/aj/	h igh	TH	th	/θ/	t hank
J	j	/ʒ/	vis i on	SH	sh	/ʃ/	s hake
L	l	/l/	log	AY	ay	/eɪ/	p ay
M	m	/m/	m at	EE	ee	/i:/	b ee
N	n	/n/	n ote	OO	oo	/u:/	t ree
O	o	/o:/	o at	AA	aa	/a:/	Slightly long a

2.1.3. Concerning “y” and its mutation

It is common, especially for people whom use /j/ (yolk) in every day speech, to pronounce y as such. However, it is only really accepted with major Waj speakers if this mutation precedes a /ə/ sound or, less acceptedly, a /aj/ sound.

An example of this is the word yawfi, which some might pronounce /jəwfaj/ or /ɪjəwfaj/ instead of /ɪəwfaj/.

3. Words, phrases & specials

3.1. Commons

3.1.1. Pronouns

de: Used like English's I; it is to address oneself.

sha: Used like English's you; it is to address the listener. This can be made plural for more than one listener.

she: Used near to English's us & we; it is to address oneself and others which one is with at the time; an inclusive.

pe: Used near to English's us & we; it is to address oneself and others which one is associated; an exclusive.

ma: Used like English's she & her; it is used to reference a female object / person. Can be plural.

da: Used like English's he, his & him; it is used to reference a male object / person. Can be plural.

dma: Used like English's they & them; used to reference multiple people of multiple genders.

sada: It is used to reference a object / person of unknown gender.

ip: Used like English's that & it; used to identify to a specific person or thing previously mentioned, being observed or easily identified.

il: Used like English's this; used to identify a specific thing close at hand or being indicated or experienced.

is: a word referring to the conversation topic, in general.

ipla: Used like English's those; the plural form of ip.

illa Used like English's these; the plural form of il.

3.1.2. Contractions

Contractions are letters that are added onto the front of a word, or between two words. All it is is a shortened word that, when wrote, is “[contraction]’[word].” The apostrophes are spoken like the hyphen in uh-oh.

-a'-, the English and, Waj's ap. Only used if to not be confused with a.

b'-, the English be/is/am/are, Waj's b.

f'-, the English good, Waj's fleen.

o'-, used for possession.

j'-, the English of, Waj's jup.

c'-, the English big/very/much, Waj's cac.

g'-, the English with, Waj's grap.

n'-, the English no/not, Waj's ne.

r'-, the English in, Waj's ra.

h'-, the English to/toward/towards, Waj's he.

3.1.2.1. Merged contractions

Sometimes, contractions are spoken as part of the word they are attached to—called a morph. This is especially common with words starting with a vowel. Here is a table with a few of the possibilities:

Contraction	Word	The morph	Meaning	Usage
b'	a	ba	be a	a standard
j'	an	jan	of the	accepted
b'	an	ban	be the	accepted
h'	an	han	towards the	accepted
r'	an	ran	in the	accepted
f' (abstract)	eci	ecif	best	a standard
f' (abstract)	ecac	ecacf	better	a standard

3.1.3. Suffixes

3.1.3.1. Waj Suffixes

Suffixes are things you can add onto the end of a word to change their meaning. If the word already ends in the letter the suffix starts, it is spoken as one letter, but wrote as two.

-la: Shows a word is plural, but only if its quantity is not already known.

-lo: Alike to English's -ing; makes a noun / adjective a continuous and/or progressive action.

-ly: Alike to English's -ness, -ion, -ly, -dom & -hood; makes the word mean “have the qualities of [the word].”

-th: Makes the word a past tensed verb.

-sh: Makes the word a future tensed verb.

-lu: Alike to English's -ize & -ise; makes the word mean “make something become [the word (or the qualities of the word)].” Also makes the word a verb.

-le: Makes a word some of itself. Example: an yiple, some of the people.

-li: Makes a word all of itself. Example: an yipli, all of the people.

-lee: Makes a word mean “person of [the word].” Usually added to verbs; makes word a noun.

-mee: Makes a word mean “machine of [the word].” Usually added to verbs; makes word a noun.

3.1.3.2. English Prefixes & Suffixes

- In the case of English's -ism, -izm, -ology & -lody, Waj substitutes them with the use of of, jup.
- In the case of English's -est, eci meaning most should be used.
- In the case of English's mal- & mis-, the use of Waj's neti meaning fault could be used as an adjective.
- In the case of English's re-, jasta meaning again should be used in context.

3.1.4. Possession

In Waj, to make an item be possessed by another, you use this format:

[possessor] o'[thing being possessed]

The possessor can also be the last mentioned object with de being the default possessor. Here are some examples:

the cat's cat
an nyan o'nyan

my dog o'nyen

it's your one hope ip b'sha o'wan flenc

3.1.5. Numerals

Numbers are fairly simple. Units are plain, tens end with -le, hundreds end in te, thousands end in ty, millions end in c and billions end in g.

nan zero

wan one too two ree three foo four fif five

sis six sin seven

it eight

nin nine wanle ten

wanlewan eleven

wanletoo twelve

wanlereee thirteen wanlefoo fourteen

wanlefif fifteen

wanlesis sixteen

wanlesin seventeen

wanleit eighteen

wanlenin nineteen

toole twenty toolewan twenty-one reele thirty

foole fourty

fifle fifty sisle sixty sinle seventy itle eighty ninle ninety wante one hundred

wanty one thousand

wanc one million

wang one billion

Some examples

wanty-fifte 1,500

fiflety 50,000

wantetooleree 123

fifty-ninte-fooleree 5,943

wanletootywan 12,001

oly wan 0.1

wantefoole oly foo 140.4

(hyphens are optional)

3.1.5.1. Alternate Numerals

There is an alternate accepted system of numerals in where there are no numbers which are classed higher than 10. This can be used mostly where numbers are short and easy to remember. An example:

toonanwanfoo 2014

3.1.5.2. Base 16

Waj has support for base 16, by using 7 words to cover ten to sixteen:

want A

wen B woo C wo D

wor E

wif F

3.1.6. Days of the week

Waj's days of the week loosely (due to Monday) follow the numbers from [oo] to sin.

unoo monday

untoo tuesday

unree wednesday

unfoo thursday

unfif friday

unsis saturday

unsin sunday

3.1.7. Months of the year

upjar january

upfar february

upmar march

upar april

upyar may upnar june

uplar july

upgar august upsar september
upcar october
upbar november
updar december

3.1.9. Directions

The directions up, down, left and right are based off the 4 quarters of a clock.

Up	shad
Down	thad
Left	reead
Right	ninad
Forwards	nanad
Backwards	sisad

3.1.10. Limbs & body parts

Head	pqsa
Shoulders	pagella
Knees	paagela
Toes	thastafla
Knees	paagela
Toes	thastafla
Eyes	gatela
Ears	nqd
Mouth	yawi
Nose	paw
Elbow	taage
Arm	tistaf
Leg	taystaf
Finger	shastaf
Tail	thast
Hair	gapita
Fingernail	shastef
Waist	caty
Belly	pesty
Hip	sey
Tongue	yawpas
Teeth	tawila
Paw	yisif
Lap	taystafla
Foot	taystif
Hand	tistif

3.1.8. Common sayings

ranc, ranc sha thanks, thank you

ranti please

ran sorry

ibeec! welcome!

¿sha flanc? you well?

ye, flanc il pqto Yes, well tonight

ne, n'flanc il upi No, not well today

3.2. Slang

There is some slang within Waj of which can be accepted in normal speech, but is discouraged in writing.

3.2.1. Possessive slang

To make the event of possession smaller the following words can be used:

your name?

¿so'dec?

his name isn't Steve?

¿do'dec n'steef?

It's her cat

ip mo'nyan

My name is June

eo'dec joon

3.2.2. Rude slang

There are words in Waj which give off a rude tone due to the way in which they are syntaxed. They are as follows:

shath you-(past-tense) This is rude due to the fact the valediction sheth has the means of indicating the conversation between two people has ended – it literally means us-(past-tense). This rude (and sassy) valediction shows that the speaker wasn't really listening to their conversational partner.

3.2.3. Other

ati: Used as too but where it is exclusive to the speaker, and not a carry-on of conversation.

4. Grammar

4.1 Syntax & word usage

Waj was templated directly from English grammar. So, these are just the changes from English grammar and the use of some words.

4.1.1. Dropping of subject

In Waj, if the subject (the person or object being talked about) is entirely clear, it can be dropped. The default subject is de, I. Examples:

I really love chocolate.

c'shcaja fafatadat. I Big'platonically-love chocolate.

(In this document, all instances unneeded are in square brackets)

4.1.2. The English use of “to”

In English, to can be put at the start of a verb such as “to want,” or it could mean toward/towards. So, the alternative to using “to [verb],” like so:

I want to.

[de] nepi mec. I want do.

Do you want to go to the park?

¿sha nepi dep h'an tara? you want go to the park?

Do you need to?

¿sha nep mer? you need do?

When saying “He told him to do it” you would simply drop the to (and add he): “da wap h'da mec ip.”

In a case where you actually want for something that is a verb and a noun, you would make the verb end in -lo like so:

I want to pay.

[de] nepi cayaclo. I want paying.

4.1.3. The use of “cac / cyc” & “cacla / cyclo”

In Waj, cac means big, large, very & much; cac is used for quality verses caclo for quantity. Some examples:

Many cats

caclo nyan many cat

Few small cats

cyclo cyc nyan many small cat

Big cat

cac nyan or c'nyan

4.1.4. The English use of “that” in Waj

In Waj, ip means that & it, and is used for the contexts of those as normal. However, an extra English use makes it also (in context) instead mean who, whom & which. This is not found in Waj, and those words' usages are preserved (yipa, yipa & git).

4.1.5. Past & future tense verbs

In Waj, to make a word past or future tense, you simply add -th or -sh:

He killed her!

ida unith ma!

The cat then walked away...

an nyan may pasipth derp...

He will be walking soon!

iush, da pasipsh! soon, he walk-(future-tense)!

4.1.6. The English use of “like”

In English, like can mean to like something and also alike to something. “Like a rabbit” would be “bana a nyp” in Waj (bana meaning alike). “I like her” is “[de] shcafi ma” in that context.

4.1.7. The dropping of “b” b is am, are, is & be in English. There are some exceptions of its absence in Waj, which mostly include any dropping of it where the sentence can still make sense. There are some other scenarios of acceptance:

I'm going to do that [de] mecsh ip. I do (future tense) that.

I'm going to the shops.
[de] deplo h'an cawog. I going to the shops.
The basic rule is: if it's still understandable, you may do it.

4.1.8. Use of English's “in”

In, as a quick example, is to say something is inside of something else, or within something else. Those uses are the same in Waj. However, what is not the same is when you would want to say “It is in two days.” The substitution for that use is hej, at: “Ip b'hej too upila.” “It is in two days.”

4.1.9. The English order of “in” and “to”

ra meaning in and he meaning to are ordered differently in Waj like so:

She went into the building...
ma depth h'r'an dwec... She goed towards in the building...

4.1.10. English's “changed to”

Instead of saying “bu he” meaning “change towards” literally, you would say “acshi he” meaning “new towards.”

4.1.11. English's -s suffix as a third person singular present

In Waj, the English suffix -s (in it's non-plural forming form) is used like so:

He eats cats.
da canc nyanla. He eat cats.

She craves it.
ma nepolo ip. She craving it.

Life goes on.
unia bec. life continue.

4.1.12. “b” ending a sentence

In Waj, b is something that is discouraged from being at the end of a sentence. To avoid this, you could perhaps reword a sentence entirely, or say something like the following:

I am not!

i[de] n'b'whatever it is!

-or-in'b'de! Not is I!

4.1.13. Concerning English's “I have done” & “I have to”

In Waj, have is only a word which means you have an item in your possession. Therefore, these translations play-out as so:

I have to!

i[de] epa! I must!

I have to go do something...

[de] epa dep ap mec geo... I must go and do something...

I have done it before.

[de] mecth ip [r'an thaj]. I did it [in the past].

I haven't seen it.

[de] n'matith ip. I not seen it.

4.1.14. Concerning “geo” and “geale”

geo is something unspecified or unknown, whereas geale is some thing which means some (not all) of a thing.

4.1.15. The use of “-loth” & “-losh”

In Waj, -loth is the combined suffixes -lo & -th, and -losh is -lo & -sh. These are to make a verb continuous/progressive yet in the past or future. Some examples of use:

He killed her!

ida uniloth ma!

ida unith ma!

The cat then walked away...

an nyan may pasiploth derp...

an nyan may pasipth derp...

He will be walking soon!

iush, da pasiplosh! soon, he walking (future tense)

4.1.16. Concerning events done regularly in the past

In Waj, to say you have done something, you say you did something. However, if the speaker needs to stress that this event was done regularly, they would say meclath, doing-(past-tense).

4.1.17. The use of “-uth”

In Waj, -lub is a suffix close to English's -ise & -ize. -uth is a mutation of a past tense -lub. It is used like so:

o'nyan lifyguth ip nayi... My cat paint-ized it black...

4.1.18. Concerning “il” & “ip”

In Waj, il means this and ip means that. They have the same handling in both languages, excluding the following:

This one?

Yes, that one.

ɿil wan? This one?

ye, il wan. Yes, this one.

4.1.19. Concerning Waj's plurals, some, and alls

In Waj, so long as the amount of something is known, you do not need to make the object plural—the marker is for saying there is more than one. Here are examples of the three suffixes:

All the dogs

an nyenli (lit. the dog-all)

Some of the dogs

nyenle bai wap (lit. dog-some can talk)

There are 5 dogs. Do you have dogs?

fif nyen tery. ɿsha op nyenla? five dog here. you have dogs?

4.1.20. Concerning “ap” & “aap”

In Waj, ap is used as, but not limited to, the showing of two items becoming one object. aap is used as, but not limited to, the showing of two items separately, but still being acted on.

I hate you and him, and I want a car.

carcq sha ap da aap nepi a metyc. Hate you & him and want a car.

4.1.21. The use of English's “what”

In Waj, mar is used as a determiner and a question-word. However, it is used slightly differently than in English:

What is your name?

ɪsha o'dec mar? your name what?

4.1.22. The use of English's “why”

In Waj, ju means because. It is used instead of why:

Why are you here?

ɪsha tery ju? you here because?

4.1.23. The use of English's “that” and “which”

In English, that can be used as which. This is not the same in Waj - only git is used.

4.1.24. Acting upon an object

In English, consider the sentence, “threw it away.” In Waj, the order of the words would be, “threw away it.”

4.1.25. English's “would” and “could”

In English, a pronoun or object name would come before would or could, however, in Waj, they are used to make clauses a would or could, where the person or object is included in that:

You would do that for me?

ɪed sha mec ip mer de?

4.1.26. Telling and talking

In Waj, as English, there is a difference between telling and talking to. These, however, are expressed using the same word, wap. The following examples show their usage:

He told me to do that.

da waph de mecth ip. He told me do that.

He was talking to me about this.

da waph g'de jui il. He spoke with me about this.

4.1.27. Waj's “git” and “yipa”

In English, which and who are used to ask or state which things or who referring to people. However, in Waj, yipa meaning who is used for any living being, whether it's a microbe, tree or monkey – all regardless.

4.1.28. English's "one"

In English, one can note some indefinite day or time in the future. In Waj, this is expressed differently, like so:

You shall see him, one day.

sha matish da, a upi. You see-(future-tense) him, a day.

You can also use, rather formally, one to indicate yourself or many others, indirectly: "Once one becomes tired, they best sleep." In Waj, this is replaced with a yip, literally meaning a person; "One is the Queen" would become "I is the Queen," or whomever else you are trying to reference.

4.1.29. Referencing people by amount

In English, "just us two," and, "you two," becomes, "just two you," and, "two you."

4.1.30. English's "mine"

In Waj, there is a word for mine being do, but it's something you should try to avoid. To preserve the possession system, change things like, "that is mine," to "that is my cat."

4.1.31. Moods

Waj has no moods, and does as English – uses auxiliary verbs. However, there are some auxiliary replacements and omissions, such as follows:

do you have it?

isha op ip? you have it?

He has done that.

da mecth ip. he did that.

4.1.32. Commanding others

As there is a dropping of subject (4.1.1.), and commands in English are usually given with a default subject of you; you must address those who you want to have do something. Example:

Go away!

isha, dep derp! You, go away!

4.1.33. English's “as...as”

In English, you can say something is as something as something else using “as...as...” In Waj, this is different: you basically drop the first as like follows:

He's as big as a house.

da cac bul a dweci. He [is] big as a house.

4.1.34. Nouns as verbs

In Waj, you can use a noun as a verb so long as it still makes sense. As in, it is an exclusive verb of an object. Some examples:

I have been driving all day.

[de] metyc upili, il upi. I car day-all, today

I can speak English.

[de] bai eng. I can English.

4.1.35. Waj's “re”

In English, a sentence using if would be worded like so: “if X then Y.” In Waj, this sentence is constructed differently: “X re Y.” An example:

If you are English, you're awesome.

sha eng re sha flenap. You English if-then you awesome.

4.2. Formality

In Waj, it can be considered formal as if you address people by their titles of respect, as in most languages. However, the most formal device is not using contractions in writing and speech. Example, instead of saying “mashc j'an dwara” meaning “Lady of the manor” you would write and say it “mashc jup an dwara,” where the contraction j' is used to its full extent - jup.

5. Writing and other documenting

5.1. In all forms

Waj can be written in any method that others can understand; it is perfectly acceptable to use the Latin alphabet for conveying. However, the preferred rules are as follows:

- No capitalisation is used;
- The use of “i” and “j” before a sentence or clause using that punctuation mark;
- Abbreviations are wrote with hyphens or apostrophes between the letters;
- A tilde can be used on the end of a word to make the speaker lengthen the word in the best way possible. This is usually done by increasing the length of the last vowel.

Example:

We're going to the beach! Yaaaaaaay!
ipe b'deplosh h'an tefaf! jaa~!

5.1. Alphabets & scripts

5.1.1. Common Alphabet

Waj's alphabet is as follows:

aa a ay o oo i ee e u y q d h t th n p f g c r l j b m s sh w

/a: a eɪ o: u: aj i: ε u ɪ ɒ d h t θ n p t g k r l ʒ b m s ʃ w/

Absolutely no need to remember it, nor a nursery rhyme.

As you may have noticed, Waj uses Latin Script in most forms, but here are the changes a Waj user can use any number of:

- any occurrence of “sh” becomes “ɔ”
- any occurrence of “shc” becomes “x”
- any occurrence of “aa” becomes “ā”
- any occurrence of “th” becomes “ɿ”
- any occurrence of “ay” becomes “ʌ”
- any occurrence of “oo” becomes “Ω”
- any occurrence of “ee” becomes “μ”

Applying all o these changes, the alternate alphabet is as follows:

aa a ay o oo i ee e u y q d h t th n p f g c r l j b m s sh w

ā a ʌ o Ω I μ e u y q d h t ɿ n p f g c r l j b m s ɔ w

5.1.2. gasyan amej

“Cord System”

```
|
%-----%--
%--%-----%--
|
%-----%-----
%--%-----%---
%-----%-----
%--%-----
```

The above reads “shesh teryc”

- Based off Quipu
- Each cord is seperated into 27 segments
- Each cord is attached to a primary cord
- To signify a letter, a knot is put in that part of the cord*
- If a knot is made and the next letter is after it in the alphabet, a knot can be made on the same cord
- If the next letter is not on the same cord then we move to the next cord
- If it is a full stop, two gaps are put in the primary cord
- If it is a space, there is a gap on the primary cord
- The direction of read is the end of the primary cord that is the longest

* Most common letter order is used to theoretically shorten the length of cords used

(a, i, e, c, t, n, p, l, y, r, o, s, f, u, m, g, d, j, b, ay, w, h, q, x, ee, sh, th, oo) (q was placed using guess-work. This system was written up pre-Q)

in a real system, it could be shortened and becomes 14 segments - two knots are made, and their values added, instead

5.1.3. hqal

hqal is Waj's Morse Code.

I sampled some recent text and found the most common letters. Then, I did a simple binary-like thing to make it as theoretically short as possible.

lqal is hqal's binary equivalent.
