CNET editors' review on Samsung Omnia II

Announced in June, the Samsung Omnia II is offered by Verizon wireless carrier for $199.99 which has a two-year contract and following a $100 mail-in rebate. The successor towards Samsung Omnia has become hotly anticipated for months, but also in that point several excellent touch-screen smartphones now Verizon, like the Motorola Droid and HTC Droid Eris, making us wonder if Samsung waited too much time to produce the product. However, after working several days while using the Omnia II, we can say that this Windows Mobile 6.5 smartphone certainly has earned an area within our hearts, distinguishing itself in the competition with excellent multimedia capabilities....
