

*What a curious structure
This beast follows
Two eyes, no more, no less
Showing less than half their potential at best*

*A mouth, a nose
And no tail to behold
Two legs and two arms
A tongue used to utter charms*

*Yes, yes, these self named human beings
Are very strange indeed
No way to look front and behind
At the same time*

*However these things evolved
Is quite the mystery to be solved
No wings to soar high
All logic put in they seem to defy*

*And yet for these fascinating beings
Whom death always in the end deprives
Are so keen on living
And carrying on with their daily lives*