Dear Imagine,

I would like to thank you for the regrettable opportunity of being part of your CS:GO team. As much as I did not enjoy my time in your team, there are lots of things that I have yet to get off my chest regarding your management of the team and your attitude in general. I hope you take the time to thoroughly read through this letter.

Firstly, I would like to address your nonchalant attitude towards the management of the competition. Your obvious lack of concern was evident through your hands off approach towards the setting-up and running of the competition. You even flew overseas despite knowing that there was a competition on-going over the weekend that you were away. ⁽¹⁾ The very competition that you said you were going to organise, you even put "Tournament Organizer: Hong Wei" proudly on your website ⁽²⁾ But if you're organising a competition, shouldn't you at least be present throughout the entire competition? Oh but wait, you were not were you? You were having the time of your life in Australia (not even sure it's true) eating kangaroo urethras and licking koala anuses. Which in my un-professional and uncertified opinion, clearly attributed to your absences throughout the competition.

Secondly, your sponsors. Who the heck puts a Facelt referral link ⁽⁴⁾ and claim that they're a partner c'mon man even a cockroach has more brains than that. You think that the free 100 points is gonna get you somewhere on the road to that Fiat Limited Edition that they're giving away for 5,000,000 points? Dream on son, you can't Imagine everything.

I mean honestly speaking, when there's a partnership between the organisations, there's usually a promotion, advice or service that is provided for the partnership. There clearly hasn't been any promotions, and you expect me to believe that you're gonna get advice from Facelt on how to run a competition that could be monetised? Please, credit the team behind Facelt with more intelligence than a cockroach, you're basically stealing potential business from them if they were to help you. Lastly, as far as my memory serves, Leet.gg, Facelt and FreemyApps have yet to provide any services to my team, or maybe we were just denied them. But seeing as your partnerships have provided us with nothing short being useless, we're better off on our own. No point riding on your success as a "owner" if there wasn't any success to begin with, clearly a poor example "on how to be successful" if you can't even manage your teams properly.

Last but not least, your 'management team'. Do that even exist? From what I know, they didn't do shit. Whenever we requested for something, we got nothing. We had to pay for everything, tournament fees, game server, teamspeak server and a logo. Having to pay for our own tournament ⁽⁵⁾ really pissed me off, how retarded is that? It's like inviting your family to a meal that you're organising and telling them to pay for it. Where were we supposed to conduct our trainings without a game server? At your Imaginative house? You did not even offer to help, you were not even concerned and you still expected results from us? That is some next level support towards us. Oh and please do understand the game before you make any decision that could affect the team(s). Just to re-emphasise, Imagining yourself to be an expert just because you are Global Elite does not make you any smarter (that's why you are in IJC).

Once again, I would like to thank you for such a unsatisfactory opportunity, I doubt I will ever get to experience this again. Despite this being such an aids experience, I would never forget you, or what you've done. Everytime I look at a blank wall, I will be reminded of you.

There was nothing, a total figment of your Imagination.

Sincerely,

Members and Manager of Aim Dependant
