

When you create an account with Pairade, you give us your full name and email address, and create a username and password. If you want, you can give us a pseudonym instead of your legal name.

If you don't feel like creating an account from scratch, you may be able to sign in through an account you already have with another service, such as Facebook.

Your user profile helps you customize your account and connect with other Pairade users. Your profile automatically includes your name and username.

To help you connect with other Pairade users and to personalize your Pairade experience, we may ask for additional information, including your contacts and location.

We receive some other information automatically when you use Pairade. This includes data about your device, software, operating system, your IP address, and the date and time of each request you make to Pairade.

You may link your Pairade account to other services you use, such as social networking sites, photosharing services and media publishers. If you connect your Pairade account with a thirdparty service, we will not collect information through that service.

If you want to email something you see through Pairade to a friend who isn't already a Pairade account holder, we may keep their email address for the purpose of sending such email and improving our services. Recipients may contact us at privacy@Pairade.com to request that we remove this information from our database.
