DALLAS (November 10, 2016) – Ubiquimedia and Studio Movie Grill (SMG) announced today that Johnathan Brownlee's, "THREE DAYS IN AUGUST," will release at 18 locations in 10 cities through an exclusive partnership.

"THREE DAYS IN AUGUST," will debut Friday December 2nd and run for a minimum of 7 days through Thursday December 8th with multiple show times daily. Tickets are on sale online beginning Friday November 11th. This indie drama will also be available December 16th on iTunes and VOD in early 2017.

The film is directed by Johnathan Brownlee, written by Chad Berry, David Langlais and Johnathan Brownlee and Produced by Johnathan Brownlee and Adam Donaghey. Executive Producers are Allen Stringer, David Kiger and Shannon Kincaid whose life experiences inspired the story.

"THREE DAYS IN AUGUST," is the story of an adopted Irish American artist who confronts her past when she invites both her birth parents and adopted parents to come together over a weekend for her to paint a family portrait. A true ensemble cast including veterans Barry Bostwick, Mariette Hartley and Meg Foster.

"With SMG and production partners Alter Ego, Sony Digital, Leica and Lucky Post, to name a few, we have created a truly unique way to produce and distribute a feature film that benefits both filmmakers and distributors," said director/producer Johnathan Brownlee. "As longtime supporters of filmmakers and independent film, Studio Movie Grill is excited to partner with Johnathan on his directorial debut. SMG is a conscious business and the program represents a strong stakeholder model, which allows for a win-win for all involved," added Brian Schultz, Founder/CEO of Studio Movie Grill.
