Preface For Version 2

This is not a tutorial on how to play, there are plenty of books easily available in printed form or on the Internet.

This booklet came after I met a new player at a 'Pub Slow & Easy Session'. The guy had only to that point tried to learn on his own by ear, but he wanted to learn how to read the dot's so to give him access to thousands of tunes out there.

I printed out a couple of tunes for him to try along with a keyboard layout showing the different notes against a stave.

I also took the deliberate decision to, "as normal" show the Key signature . I have also put the pitch name in the note-heads and also show which notes are accidentals, this is more of a { Brain/Finger } reminder that something in the tune is slightly different.

Using this method it also allows me to make the music in larger fonts than the norm. It also helps people who have difficulty in reading due to any visual problems they may have.

So now I have come to the end of this first effort of trying to help new players of a BOX to learn the dots.

I have as you may have noted from my first effort, I have stayed with putting the tunes in alphabetical order, rather than try and put them in order of difficulty, Is it not more fun to sometimes just fall upon a tune and think that's something I would like to try.

I hope you find this useful, do with it what you wish, share, alter, but do not sell it this is a FREE Booklet. If you want to donate, please give to your own favorite local charity.
