Proving Diminished Capacity Post-Death

One of the most difficult tasks of a practitioner in the estate litigation field is attempting to prove capacity or lack thereof after the death of the decedent. This article will explore those special concerns in proving capacity post-death.

A Guide to Your Legal "Spring Cleaning"

With the warmer weather approaching the Spring is a great time to take a look at any legal issues and "clean" them up! Examples include:

- Updating your Advance Directives, such as your Health Care Proxy, Living Will or Power of Attorney;
- Updating any Last Wills & Testaments or Trust documents;
- Reviewing any property tax documents to ensure the proper exemptions are in place;
- Looking at your retirement savings process;
- Checking your insurance coverage - both medical and life; or
- Setting up an estate plan to ensure protection and preservation of your estate.

You should always make sure that your estate plan is up to date and that death, birth, marriage, divorce, relocation, or anything else has not affected the plan you have set up.
