Accreditation is a formal process wherein a health care organization is deemed credible by an external organization. Standards of practice are used to assess the credibility. According to Sollecito & Johnson 2013, health care professionals, “have been known to be skeptical about the purpose, value, and benefits [of accreditation]”. After completing the week’s reading, answer the following questions:

- a. In your opinion, why are some health care professionals skeptical about the accreditation process? Explain your answer.
- b. What role, if any, does professional certification play in the accreditation of an organization?
- c. How could you describe the role that accreditation plays in continuous quality improvement to increase buy-in for the process from members of the health care team?

Your initial post should be 250-300 words and utilize a minimum of two scholarly sources from the Ashford University Library, cited in APA format.
