

Marvel's failed experiment on replacing fan favorite characters ends in disaster.

Giant liar Bleeding Cool takes massive potshot at comic book fans while pandering to Socjus.

Irony is lost on Marvel staff and the "critics" that protect them from their costumers (the fans) by lying about geeks.

ALL ABOUT GEEKDOM

EXCLUSIVE NEWS TODAY

HERE WE GO AGAIN.

The year was 2014

In the middle of the GamerGate revolt, a series of now infamous articles were published by the Gaming specialized media, the "Gamers are dead" articles.

Among all that were published I want to bring to your attention one, published by Gamasutra and written by Leigh Alexander.

"Gamers" don't have to be your audience. "Gamers" are over. Was the title and in this article the author shows just how much contempt and even hate she has for the subculture which she pretended to be a part of and the people that truly are part of it.

She exudes bile and bitterness against the site's audience and their costumers, showing she knows nothing about market demographics PR or marketing. She tells anyone that cares to read it how they can still earn big bucks and be virtuous by not "pandering to the filthy gamers."

And now Gamasutra has a very low traffic, no gamer goes there unless it is in search for roasting material.

Just like with all the other sites that joined in the demonization of their audience the site is spiraling towards its death, which can't come sooner, They deserve to go bankrupt, it couldn't have happened to more deserving folks.

It's been 3 years, and the 3 LW still keep on harping about the narrative, still keep on milking their victim status, while they too spiral downwards to a slow and painful death by obscurity. Nothing more painful to a narcissist.

GamerGate asked for very little, some ethic codes in their media, and they got it, this still didn't end the infestation of the media or the companies that cater to that market, well now it's time for GamerGate2.0, it's time for ComicsGate, MGTGate, SciFiGate, etc. Its time for #GeekGate!

Back to the present

Today, Mags Visaggio tweeted what could very well be her, condensed and adapted to comic fans, version of the article by Leigh Alexander.

Notice how she proudly claims that she has to put herself on the page, otherwise this deluded individual thinks she is under-serving her audience.

By giving the unwashed masses of wrong-fans what they want she isn't giving them what they deserve in exchange for their hard earned money.

Because, of course, everybody and their mom secretly want to learn about the deepest recesses of her schizoid, sociopathic, psychopathic mind.

Or else her writings will have no soul. Do these people ever read/hear themselves?

Are they so Narcissistic they have convinced themselves we secretly love them? Not that I hate them since it would be wasted time and energy, but I couldn't give any less of a rats ass about them.

The only reason I ever talk about them is because they are ruining my hobbies!

Can't we go back to talking comics?

BY GEEKS, FROM GEEKS & FOR GEEKS