

Alex Bradford

alex.bradford@voyagerglobal.com

Alex Bradford is a technology investor and serial entrepreneur. Alex is Managing Partner at Voyager Global Advisors (www.voyagerglobal.com), a technology-focused investment group in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Voyager's mission is to accelerate growth of technology companies that are changing the world or changing their industries.

Alex is a co-founder of CryptoResearch (www.cryptoresearch.io), the first blockchain platform disseminating research and information on cryptocurrencies (the “Bloomberg of Crypto”).

He was founding CEO of Brazil Internet Group, a holding company of leading e-commerce brands in Brazil, and co-founder of Yango / HotelHoje, the first online discount travel marketplace in Latin America.

Alex was a Research Analyst (long/short TMT) at SAC Capital Advisors, a $14B hedge fund, where he invested in Internet, software, and video game companies. Before SAC, he was an investment banker (TMT) at Goldman Sachs, and a Business Analyst at McKinsey & Company.

Alex was founding CEO of the HIV/AIDS Treatment Access Initiative, an anti-retroviral drug redistribution platform with >60 branches throughout the US. He is author of the book Generation Y for the Global Village and has taught courses on entrepreneurship at Stanford.

He received a BA in Human Biology (2005) with Honors and Distinction (top 5%) from Stanford University, where he was a Class President, founder of the Stanford Undergraduate Research Journal, and elected to USA Today's All-USA College Academic Team (“top 20 college students” in the US). Alex received his MBA from the Harvard Business School (2007), where his favorite course was “Building and Sustaining a Successful Enterprise” taught by Clay Christensen.