

Dear Learners and Colleagues,

Good news! I am writing to you today to share the results of the Academic Employee vote on the latest proposal to purchase a bus and throw the students under it.

A majority of the colleges accepted the offer province-wide.

This was the news we had hoped for, and it means the students can now continue to float anxiously around campus and in their parent's basements, compulsively checking Facebook and their bank statements in a cloud of vape smoke. They must now reassess their plans and expectations for their future, and apply to their local McDonalds.

There has been a lot of speculation about what will happen next. I am not going to speculate, but I truly think the last season of Game of Thrones will be lit, bruh.

I will keep my promise, to promise that you will be informed, as soon as I promise to have promising new information. We will continue to update our information page, algonquinstrike/thrownderthebus with details as they become available. Perhaps when the Student's Association finds the next best way to use our money without asking to support the College. Might I suggest a Sky Writer airplane?

What is certain is that we will get through this time following the values of our College: Your Money, Constant Construction, A Leak in Every Room Dripping into a Bucket, A Smelly Library, and Vague Updates. The Algonquin family is built on these values – those who started the College, and those who have built it to be one of the most respected colleges in the west end of Ottawa over the past 5 weeks.

We are navigating difficult times right now, but I continue to promise and hope, that we will all hope, to promise, to be together again very soon. I promise.

Sincerely,
