AVAILABILITY SEARCHES

We recommend conducting a full similarity search prior to applying for registration or commencing the use of a new trademark. Only a full similarity trademark search may provide some certainty as regards the availability of a trademark.

There are two types of trademark searches: mere identical searches and full similarity searches. Mere identical searches reveal prior trademarks that are identical to the search criteria, but not the often highly relevant similar trademarks which often differ from the search criteria in no more than one single character.

BENELUX, FRANCE, GERMANY or GREAT-BRITAIN (with international registrations and EU trademarks)	Standard	Urgent	Immediate
IDENTICAL SEARCH irrespective the number of classes	120	145	180
SIMILARITY SEARCH in one to three classes For each additional class (maximum surcharge 200%)	210	250	315

Standard: Report within 5 to 7 full working days

Urgent: Report within 2 to 3 full working days

Immediate: Report within 1 full working day

Please contact us for mere identical trademark searches or full similarity searches in other countries or for searches revealing trademarks in the name of a given applicant or registered owner.

WATCHES

By monitoring a trademark, you will be notified of new applications for trademarks that may conflict with your prior trademark and against which you may want to take action. Monitoring a trademark allows to avoid in an early stage a conflicting trademark from disturbing your market and affecting your rights.

Depending on the geographical extent of the monitoring service, we distinguish four types of watches of word or figurative trademarks:

	Reports by e-mail
Worldwide:	235
Europe:	185
European Union (28 member states):	125
Benelux, Germany, France or Great-Britain: (including International Registrations and EU trademarks)	50

The aforementioned amounts cover the monitoring of a word or a figurative trademark in one to three classes for a period of one year with an electronic report of the retrieved later trademarks. There is a surcharge of 20% for each additional class from the 4th but with a maximum of 200%. Classes 42 to 45 are considered as one class.

A domain name is not an Intellectual Property Right but the use and the registration of a domain name may interfere with trademarks. DCP also offers domain name administration services but technical aspects pertaining to domain names (name servers, hosting, ...) do not belong to our core competencies.

Our tariffs are mentioned in the above table. The amounts indicated are for the registration or the renewal of a domain name for an initial or an additional one year's period.
