PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Dear friends, Rotary's service to our community is through projects, we have put ourselves and our membership at task to come up with project proposals from which we can eventually get funding to our needy communities.

Our club will have each buddy group have a community needs assessment in a period of two months and report back to the club. Community assessment tools are available on rotary website, when we know the community needs we begin to share the project vision with them, they then own the project.

The centre of excellence and our signature project will soon make the Rotary club of Bweyogerere Namboole a pride and the Sub County too, the Gombolola Chief and her committee proudly provided the land and several meetings with them are on going.

Needs assessment of the project is also on going

My appeal therefore , in this given literacy month is that we can endeavor to acquire the much needed skills of assessing needs in our communities, writing project proposals and joining project implementation teams in the club.

We need more project proposals to target the project fare come February 2018, we can't wait miss the opportunity.

RUTH N. MUKASA President 2017-18

DEFINITION OF INSURANCE

Insurance is a contract whereby one party, the insurer, in return for a consideration, the premium, undertakes to pay to the other party, the insured, a sum of money or its equivalent in kind upon the happening of a specified event that is contrary to the interest of the insured.

It is important to insure for full value so that the insured is not disappointed at claim time. It is also equally important to maintain premium payments so that the policy does not lapse which may lead to loss of whatever premium might have been paid in respect of some insurance policies.

Insurance, like any other profession, has principles guiding its operations.

They are:- Indemnity, Utmost Good Faith, Insurable Interest, Subrogation, Contribution and Proximate Cause.

Indemnity:

It is a principle whereby the insurer seeks to place the insured in the same financial position after a loss as he was in immediately before the loss (as far as possible).

Utmost Good Faith:

This means that both parties to the contract have a duty to disclose, clearly and accurately all material facts relating to the proposed insurance. Any breach of this duty by the proposer may entitle the insurer to repudiate liability. Similarly the insurer is bound to inform the insured of the extent of cover offered.

Insurable Interest:

For a contract of insurance to be valid, the policyholder must have an interest in the insured item that is recognized at law whereby he benefits from its safety, well being or freedom from liability and would be prejudiced by its damage or the existence of liability. This is called the insurable interest.

Subrogation:

It is the right of an insurer to stand in the place of the insured and exercise all rights of and remedies available to the insured, whether already enforced or not.

Contribution:

It is the principle governing the manner in which the cost of claims arising on risks covered by two or more policies is shared between the insurers concerned.

Proximate Cause:

This means the active, efficient cause that sets in motion a train of events which brings about a result, without the intervention of any force started and working actively from a new and independent source.

3. Although insurance is a contract, the scope of which is largely embodied in a policy, in the case of motor vehicle insurance (third party risks), the subject is complicated in view of the intervention of the state in the formation of the contract, in the formulation of the rights and liabilities of the parties as well as in the rights of the beneficiaries of the contract.

4. Motor Insurance is traditionally sub-divided into:

- Third Party Risks Motor Policy;
- Third party and theft cover only;
- Comprehensive.

5. Compulsory Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) Policy:

Normally the State feels obliged to enact laws making it compulsory that any person who runs a motor vehicle is under duty not to use, or cause or permit any other person to use it on the road unless any liability which he/she may thereby incur arising from the use of the motor vehicle is covered by a policy or insurance (Third Party Risks) Statute 1998 in case of Uganda.

6. Scope of compulsory Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks):

The scope of compulsory third party motor insurance varies from country to country. In some countries, the liabilities are unlimited while in others they are limited. In Uganda, the liabilities are limited to shs.1 million per person and Shs.10 million per vehicle.

7. Meaning of Third Party:

The Ultimate beneficiaries of compulsory motor insurance, usually referred to as the "third party," may be a passenger or a pedestrian. It follows that the policy holder himself is not covered if injured while driving an insured vehicle himself.

8. Excluded parties:

There are certain classes of persons who are excluded from claiming under compulsory motor insurance. These include:

- (a) Employees of the insured for death or injuries arising out of and in the course of employment. Such people should presumably be covered under the workmen's compensation law. They can arrange other types of insurance cover e.g. persona accident.
- (b) Members of the insured's household.

Get to know us.....We are Zebras

Species-There are three species of zebra: Grevy's, mountain and plains

Speed demons- Zebras are very fast-moving animals, and can reach speeds of up to 65kmph when galloping across the plains. This is just fast enough to outpace predators such as lions. Foals can run with the herd within a few hours of birth.

Keeping cool-A zebra's stripy coat is thought to disperse more than 70 per cent of incoming heat, preventing the animal from overheating in the African sun.

Stripe force-It's thought that a zebra's stripes serve to help camouflage the animal in long grass, and distract predators.

Unique animals- A zebra's stripes act like an equine fingerprint - each individual's pattern is unique. Foals recognize their mothers by the pattern of their stripes, as well as by scent and call.

Social lives- While Grevy zebra society tends to be fairly open, that of plains and mountain zebras is more tight-knit, with the animals living in harems of up to six breeding females and their young, with a dominant male. Each female has a place in the hierarchy. These groups are so close that if a predator injures one individual, fellow members will circle it and attempt to scare the intruder away with their teeth and hooves.

Sleeping on the hoof- Like horses, zebras sleep standing up, and usually only when in the safety of a group.

Safety in numbers- For protection, zebra groups often come together in large herds, regularly mixing with other grazers such as wildebeest. As well as providing more eyes and ears to look out for danger, a large herd is confusing to a predator, making it harder to single out individual prey.

“MY ROTARACT EXPERIENCE SO FAR”

Hello, am Ssengooba Samuel a Rotaractor from the Rotaract Club of Bweyogerere Namboole. I joined Rotaract in (2016) one year back because I had the zeal to serve.

One thing that I hate in life is seeing people suffering, seeing people take advantage of the helpless, it does not feel right to me as a humanitarian and a Rotaractor. Ever since I joined Rotaract am proud to say that I have been part and parcel of most of the Rotaract projects that have been carried out in different parts of the country. I felt good seeing the impact we made in Hoima when we treated and gave out medical supplies to 1614 people .I felt I had served my purpose to some extent. I have loved every single minute I have spent with my fellow rotaractors in my club. They became my family, my friends and people I could count on at any moment. Rotaract has helped me to improve my leadership skills and groomed me.

The feeling I had when I chaired the installation of MGP Jimmy Osuret was an incredible experience, the installation was quite a success and I felt phenomenal. It feels good working with a team of young people (the Rotaractors) who are courageous, hardworking, principled, determined to serve at all costs and carry each other's hand at any moment. Lastly, the fact that learning does not end, I have always treasured my Club for the wonderful guest speakers we have always hosted and am thankful for the knowledge we have acquired from them. Thank you.

SSENGOوبا SAMUEL.
COMMUNITY SERVICE DIRECTOR,
ROTARACT CLUB OF BWEYOGERERE NAMBOOLE.
