- If you are filing a personal injury claim, the chances of a favorable outcome rest on the nature, quality and quantity of evidence you can produce to prove your claims.
- The more evidence you produce, the better your chances of receiving compensation.

Here are some ways to preserve evidence in a personal injury case:

Return to the accident scene: As soon as you recover from your injuries, revisit the accident scene to locate any evidence. This is important regardless of the nature of your case.
