MyQ technology and innovation recognized by HP 2018 Partner Impact Award

PRAGUE, 23 October 2018 – MyQ, developer of the managed print solution for managing, securing, and streamlining use of network printers, received the “Leading the Charge” award for Innovation at the HP JetAdvantage Partner Conference in Boise, Idaho, in May.

As an HP JetAdvantage Partner and a member of HP’s Link developer program, MyQ has been a participant in HP’s technology development, complementing the previous addition of its MyQ solution and embedded terminal for use with HP’s FutureSmart 3 and FutureSmart 4 devices.

The 2018 “Leading the Charge” award was presented in recognition of MyQ’s agile development and participation in the Link Developer’s program.

“The award recognizes our work to enhance the great potential of HP’s multifunctional printers,” said Martin Janus, CEO of MyQ. “We are quite pleased with our growing technological cooperation with HP – especially in the fast-developing areas of embedded and mobile workflow solutions.”

“As one of our development partners, MyQ brings insights into the use of workflow solutions,” said Paul Birkett, Director of Worldwide Workflow Solutions at HP. “We know MyQ has the ability to quickly move ideas into workable solutions that add value to our end customers.”

The award comes on the heels of MyQ joining the HP Partner Program and participating in the HP Link developer program. “Working with HP on JetAdvantage Link has been a positive experience where we were able to be agile and clearly communicate our ideas about what was working, not working, and needed to be improved,” said Jakub Ahmadyar, CTIO and R&D head at MyQ. “We like HP’s working culture where people are not afraid to ask difficult questions.”

The 2018 HP JetAdvantage Partner Conference brought together more than 100 JetAdvantage partners to the HP site in Boise, Idaho. This year’s conference concluded with seven JetAdvantage Partner awards being given out to individual companies, and the “Leading the Charge” award was presented to MyQ by Ed Wingate at HP Inc.
